How do you know if your lessons are really teaching to the standards? Does your planning start with a resource? “Oh, I just love teaching To Kill a Mockingbird.” Does your planning start with a strategy? “I always use lit circles.” We all struggle with meaningful planning that ensures our students are receiving instruction aligned with Mississippi College- and Career-Ready Standards. In this interactive workshop, participants will learn a step-by-step process that ensures their planning is standards-based and includes pertinent components such as formative assessment and differentiation.

What Teachers and Administrators said about Last Year’s Lunch & Learn Workshops:

“So helpful! My school could use this training. We push writing, but do we know HOW to teach it?”

“Being a reading teacher, this can help my students drastically – I plan on implementing these [strategies] over several weeks.”

“How can she present this to my school? It was the first time I truly understood how to teach writing.”
